

Putting Veterans to Work for You

Each year, more than 300,000 U.S. troops complete their military service, providing a ready-made, highly-skilled workforce ready to transition to professional opportunities. System One connects American veterans with progressive employers across diverse technical disciplines and industries, making strong matches for mutual benefit.

Ready to Serve, Ready to Excel

U.S. veterans develop exceptional qualities that transfer readily to the civilian workforce. Rigorous training in the services builds productivity, adaptability and endurance—all of which serve as valuable corporate assets. What's more, veterans possess:

Powerful Leadership Skills

Constantly expected to lead by example, veterans develop instinctive leadership skills that are just as effective in business as they are in operations.

Efficiency-driven Mindset

Service members have developed the capacity and time management skills necessary to accomplish tasks correctly, even when operating with limited resources and immense pressure.

Exposure to Current Technology

Today's military utilizes cutting-edge technology in every spectrum of service. From nuclear power to IT security, service members have hands-on experience with tools and techniques directly applicable to the private sector.

Integrity at the Core

The integrity maintained in the military is second to none, instilling a high code of ethics in service members.

Benefits of a Veterans Recruiting Initiative

Tapping into a proven veterans' workforce gives clients immediate access to skills and abilities to improve performance. Additionally, many former service members hold critical government security clearances that allow them to work on mission-critical federal contracts.

Want another great reason to hire former military personnel? Federal, state and local tax credits are widely available when you bring qualified veterans on board, starting at $1,500 and increasing based on status and work location.
